

TAKE TESTIMONY
MURDER CASE
Twelve Men Are Secured to Try
Roy Kaighn.

MAY GO TO JURY TOMORROW

SEVERAL IMPORTANT WITNESSES
EXAMINED YESTERDAY.

The evidence with which the state expects to prove Merrill M. (Roy) Kaighn guilty of murder in the first degree for the shooting of Willard S. Haynes, Nov. 26 last, is now being placed before a jury that will determine the young man's guilt or innocence. The twelfth juror was secured yesterday morning, and at 2 p. m. the state made the introduction of testimony. Several important witnesses were examined during the afternoon, and the progress made indicates that the case will be ready to go to the jury for final deliberation by tomorrow night or Friday morning. Everything sensational is being carefully avoided and very little except the plain facts of what occurred in the hearing and the preliminary examination.

The cross-examinations by the defense are very brief, but they have resulted so far in bringing out some very strong testimony in favor of the defendant, and also in showing some discrepancies between the testimony of the witnesses at the hearing and the preliminary examination.

The testimony was punctuated with numerous objections by the defense that it is claimed, will turn out to be a good deal of testimony in favor of the defendant is found guilty. All of these objections were overruled by Judge Morse, and exceptions were taken by the defense.

Jury Is Completed.

The entire session yesterday morning was devoted to the selection of the twelfth juror. After some ten or more men had been examined, James Kemp, a farmer from Crescent, was finally selected by both sides. The jury was then complete, and as it now stands is composed of: Robert N. Holt, sheepman, Mill Creek; Edward White, farmer, Mill Creek; Thomas W. Farbridge, real estate, city; Jesse Goodfellow, wool buyer, city; Charles Sharp, farmer, West Jordan; Alfred J. Grant, farmer, Granger; Thomas W. Farbridge, Jr., M. M. M. shoe factory, city; A. E. Caffey, smelter employe, Murray; Heber B. Aldous, contractor, city; Edward Korpak, grocer, Salt Lake; Henry J. Rawlins, barber, Salt Lake; James Kemp, farmer, Crescent.

When court opened at 2 p. m. for the taking of testimony the defendant, looking pale and nervous, appeared at the head of the jury box. He sat with his hands clasped in his lap. During the afternoon he sat with his head resting on the back of his chair, occasionally addressing some remarks to his father. There were few spectators in the room.

Position of Prosecution.

As soon as the information had been read to the jury, District Attorney Elchior stated to the jury what the state expected to prove. He stated that he expected to produce evidence to show that the defendant had gone deliberately to the Salt Lake Hardware company's store, about 10 o'clock on Nov. 26 last, purchased a .38-caliber revolver, had it loaded for him and then gone to the Knutsford where he inquired for Willard S. Haynes. He then stated that he expected to produce evidence to show that the defendant had gone deliberately to the Salt Lake Hardware company's store, about 10 o'clock on Nov. 26 last, purchased a .38-caliber revolver, had it loaded for him and then gone to the Knutsford where he inquired for Willard S. Haynes.

Taking of Testimony.

The state's attorney then asked that all witnesses be excluded from the courtroom and all witnesses were taken to the exception of the parents of the defendant and the newspaper representatives who happened to be witnesses.

The first witness called to the stand was E. Plough, a mining man who had known Haynes for several years. He testified as to Haynes' age and weight and that he had seen him at Mary's hospital Dec. 16 and knew it was Haynes.

The next witness called was Dr. E. Y. Root who attended Haynes during his illness just prior to the shooting. He testified that blood poisoning and exhaustion caused by the bullet wound which he described had caused the death of the man. The witness gave further testimony about the course of the bullet and where he found Haynes when he was called to the hotel to attend him.

For the purpose of showing the jury the position of things in the hotel at the time of the shooting, a map of the lobby was hung in front of the jury box and the witnesses indicated upon that the relative positions of the principal persons in the room at the time of the shooting.

Where Kaighn Got Gun.

W. P. Fowler, a clerk at the Salt Lake Hardware company's store, who sold Kaighn the fatal gun, was the next witness called. In reply to questions, "Kaighn came to the store about 10 o'clock on Nov. 26 and said he wanted to buy a gun. I showed him a Colt's revolver first and he said that was too big. Then he showed him a Smith & Wesson, but he said that was too high priced. I then showed him a four-in-hand and he took that. He asked me to show him a .38-caliber and I told him we could not sell less than a box, so he took a box. I loaded the gun for him at his request, he then put the loaded weapon in his pocket and went out."

Upon cross-examination the witness admitted that at the preliminary hearing he had sworn that the first gun he showed Kaighn had been rejected because it was too high in price, instead of too large as he now testified. The gun and cartridges were identified by Fowler.

Was Looking For Haynes.

Harry Burton, the clerk at the Knutsford, testified that Kaighn had come to him and asked for Haynes; that he had pointed out Haynes sitting in a chair, and the two then walked to the settee. He did not see Kaighn strike on the settee.

"I thought I saw something in his hand," said the witness.

Upon cross-examination the witness admitted that at the preliminary hearing he had said he didn't notice whether he had anything in his hand or not.

Miss Maggie Hemphill, a stenographer at the hotel, who sat within ten feet of the settee when the shooting occurred, testified that she saw the defendant and Haynes sitting there but did not hear any words. Her attention was again attracted to them by the report of the gun and she heard Haynes say he was shot. Then she left the room.

He Arrested Kaighn.

Police Sergeant John Hemphill, who placed Kaighn under arrest, testified that when he went into the lobby Kaighn arose from the settee and, walking towards him, said, "I'm the man you want." The witness had questioned the defendant but got only unsatisfactory answers. Hemphill identified the revolver and it was offered in evidence.

Upon cross-examination, Hemphill, in reply to a question, said he found a bottle of some kind of smelling salt alcohol. Witness had asked Kaighn if he was a dope fiend, and said that the question was prompted by the appearance of him, which led him to suspect that he was addicted to the use of some kind of a drug. He further testified that the boy seemed excited and appeared to be under the influence of liquor or something else, but was not drunk enough to have been arrested.

Officer Emil Johnson, who had taken Kaighn in charge at the police station, was next called. He testified that upon asking Kaighn what he did the shooting for, that the defendant replied, "I got the gun, but I suppose I'll hang for it, but I got the gun."

Objections were raised to the testimony by the defense upon the grounds that the defendant was under arrest and had been applied for his rights in regard to making statements. The objection was overruled and exceptions were taken.

HAD STRUGGLE WITH HOLD-UPS
P. A. Sorensen's Desperate Encounter With Robbers.

IS ATTACKED AT HIS HOME

BEATEN OVER THE HEAD BY ONE OF THE HIGHWAYMEN.

DARING ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY was made last evening at the home of P. A. Sorensen, Mr. Sorensen had a desperate struggle with the men, who were heavily armed. They broke away from him and he fired at them, but in the darkness he could not take good aim.

The police arrived soon after the shooting. After investigating the case they decided that an attempted robbery had really been made, and re-entering the patrol wagon they drove back to police headquarters. This is all the effort they made to discover the highwaymen, although the hold-ups were believed to be in the vicinity where the officers arrived.

Mr. Sorensen resides on State street, below Fifth South. The house stands well back in the yard and is heavily shaded at night owing to the dense foliage. There is a wide porch around the front of the house, which is reached by a broad flight of stairs.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the family heard some one on the porch fumbling at the door. It was supposed that some one was coming to see Mr. Sorensen, who was awake and looking out of the door. When he opened the door he looked into the muzzle of a revolver. The party who held the gun was disguised by a white handkerchief which entirely covered his face. He ordered Mr. Sorensen to keep quiet and not make any noise. The words he heard a man and the stranger's lips when Mr. Sorensen asked him what he wanted, "killed the man," and had stated that he had been laying for him for two years. Objections were raised to this testimony, but they were overruled.

The court adjourned at 10 o'clock this morning before the witness was through his testimony.

E. C. Penrose, a reporter, had heard a conversation between Kaighn and Chief of Police Hilton in which he had stated that Kaighn had been "killed the man," and had stated that he had been laying for him for two years. Objections were raised to this testimony, but they were overruled.
